

DIPLOMA IN DIABETES -- ENROLMENT FORM

Continually elevated blood glucose causes macrovascular and microvascular damage to blood vessels. Damage is incurred at all organisational levels, so that the vessels suffer deterioration in the structure of their walls and a reduction in the patency of the lumen which restricts supply of nutrition and oxygenation. The lower limbs and feet thus become susceptible to tissue viability issues - ulceration - and this all too frequently leads to the need of amputation and its devastating consequences.

The student must not claim any title or display any indication of qualification before completing the course to the satisfaction of the College.
- d) Courses must be completed within one year. It may be possible to complete the Course sooner but it is not recommended that a student fast track the coursework as there is the potential of losing the value of the Course. Extensions beyond one year may be granted and will be judged on individual circumstances and at the discretion of the College. However, this WILL incur additional costs. In all cases all theory modules must be satisfactorily completed before a student is permitted to complete the practical training element and sit the final written assessment at the College.
- e) All persons qualifying through the College of Foot Health Practitioners undertake not to plagiarize the intellectual property or create a facility for the teaching of Foot Health Practice within 100 miles radius from the College premises.

2. Fees:

The Guarantor is also required to countersign, agreeing to the terms and conditions of the contract).
- d) (see b.) No Coursework will be despatched until the signed contract is returned to the College Administration Office either by hand, post or email and the deposit payment has cleared. Please ensure if you are paying by credit/debit card that the card is valued for the full term of the agreed payment scheme.

3. Copyright:

All materials are Copyright © the author and College of Foot Health Practitioners Ltd. Intellectual Copyright exists on all products generated by the College, and copying, reproduction and misappropriation of course material by any means, known or as yet unknown, is strictly prohibited without the express permission of the author or the College.

5. Termination:

- a) The College retains the right to terminate any student observed by clinical staff to be a danger to the public. Abuse to staff, fellow students or patients will not be tolerated under any circumstance. Lateness or failure to attend clinical sessions and lectures may delay qualifying and the student may be required to attend additional training days.
- b) Non payment of fees for whatever reason after a reasonable period will result in termination and the contract will be dissolved and necessary steps WILL be taken to recover the remaining funds.
